

Part B

1. Discuss the challenges faced by social interventions aimed at promoting sustainable development education in developing countries. Explanation
2. Explain the relationship between social safety nets, women's empowerment, and population control. Explanation
3. How can the principles of reduce, reuse, and recycle contribute to effective environmental protection and sustainable resource management? Explanation
4. In what ways can promoting tolerance for diversity help reduce health inequalities in a society?
5. Explain how skill development contributes to sustainable development in marginalized communities
6. Discuss the importance of people's participation in decision-making processes for fostering inclusive societies
7. Identify key components of an effective pollution control strategy in urban areas
8. Describe the role of reuse and recycling in promoting sustainable energy usage

Part C

1. Analyze the impact of women empowerment on population control and human rights in developing countries.
2. Create a proposal for a community-based skill development program that supports sustainable development. Include potential challenges and benefits
3. Assess the effectiveness of current pollution control measures in India, and propose additional strategies that can be implemented for better environmental protection
4. Critically analyze the role of waste management and pollution control in reducing the environmental footprint of urban areas. Suggest new approaches to enhance current efforts.
5. How do environment protection policies contribute to effective waste management and pollution control?
6. How does the preservation of forests contribute to the protection and sustainability of water sources?
7. In what ways can women empowerment contribute to the social and economic development of a community?
18. Explain how the promotion of human rights contribute to the creation of an inclusive society? Explanation